Figuring out image files Your image files have many parts:

- * **File format:** The file format determines the image's internal structure and how it's stored on your computer. The most common formats are TIF, JPEG, and PDF. We cover the specifics of each format in this chapter.
- * **Exposure:** The brightness or brightness/darkness of an image. The exposure of an image determines what color it appears in and whether or not it's visible.
- * **Color:** The color of an image. In color, colors can be one of eight or more shades and colors.
- * **Gamma:** The amount of brightness or darkening or brightening of an image in the color space. Gamma is like exposure, but, instead of changing the darkness or brightness of an image, it affects how colorful or bright it appears.
- * **Levels:** The brightness or amount of darkening or brightening of an image. Levels adjust the darkest and brightest parts of an image, moving them towards gray.
- * **Hue:** The color or hue of an image. The hues are typically reddish, such as red, orange, and so on.
- * **Saturation:** The power of an image. Saturation affects how much color is in an image and whether it's vibrant or muted.
- * **Contrast:** The difference of light and dark areas in an image. The contrast of an image determines whether it's pleasing to the eye. When you're editing an image, you adjust these settings to determine what the final colors and grayscale look like. If you want to change the color scheme of an image, take a look at Chapter 9 for information on choosing and mixing colors.

Q: Efficient way of filtering out certain data rows I have a list of lists representing data that I am going to process in a loop. In each list, there are certain values that I need to filter out, and all I have so far is this: `out = [] for i in data_list: out.append([row for row in i if row[0] not in [4,5,6,7,8,9]])` Is there a more efficient way of doing this? I am thinking of using list comprehension for this, but am not sure. A: `out = [row for row in i if any(row[0] not in [4,5,6,7,8,9])]` The `any()` method returns True for False values. It is true that Amazon has made some good movies but I don't think that the Amazon Prime series has been that successful in the West. Don't get me wrong, I LOVE a good crime series but the mainstream shows like Brooklyn Nine-Nine, Lucifer, Riverdale, and The Blacklist, amaze me on a weekly basis. Anyway, yesterday, Roku released a list of the Top 25 T.V. Shows on the Roku channel. A small change in the number three spot, Amazon Prime's Killing Eve, is great, and I'd say it deserves to stay there, but I'd be ecstatic if they kept The Handmaid's Tale, Topplers, Heiress or The Crown on the Roku channel. All the top six shows are on Amazon Prime, so you can guess where the Roku Top 25 T.V. Shows are from... I'm curious to see if Amazon will release some of its movies on the Roku channel at all or if they would prefer the Roku channel to be restricted to only streaming Amazon Prime series. # -*- coding: utf-8 -*-
