A: It seems like the file has been encrypted by WinZip and it's impossible to obtain it's decompression routine (or at least noone does it publicly). Your options are: Donate a lot of money to an institute (or non-profit foundation) which is in charge of software protection. Pay someone to unlock it for you. (that is, buy a license for this software) Use another compatible tool to open it. Use alternative compression algorithm to compress the file. (for example: use 7z instead of WinZip) Look for an alternative file and try to find a solution for your program. However, I would rather recommend you to look for a solution (that you can live without) by using the WinZip's License Activation Feature (which might be as good as completely disable WinZip) or at least to pay for a license for the winzip file decryptor. This invention relates to optical path length measuring systems of the type having a light emitter and a light detector, and more particularly to a light-emitting diode illuminator for such a system. In the use of a light-emitting diode (LED) illuminator for an optical path length measuring system of the type shown in U.S. patent application Ser. No. 442,420, filed of even date, and owned by the assignee of the present invention, the invention to which the present invention is directed, it is important that the emitter of the illuminator have a constant pulse rate, and hence a constant light output, from one system to another. Furthermore, the light emitted by the diode may vary with temperature. Thus, it is important that the emitter be temperature compensating. It is an object of the present invention to provide an LED illuminator for an optical path length measuring system which provides the desired constant light output and temperature compensation.Q:
