How can this be? When we have a period of time without a period (a) the first sign of conception is elevated levels of progesterone in the blood, and (b) the time until ovulation is shorter than normal. Both factors are normal if you are just breastfeeding. If you haven't had a period of at least six months, it is possible that you are pregnant. If you have a certain body shape, and weight, it may be more difficult to produce sufficient progesterone to signal the onset of a
