Kyun! Ho Gaya Na 2004 Hindi Movie Free Download. Distalization of the mandibular first molar using a modified Taylor-type appliance and low-profile coils in children. A modified Taylor-type (TT) appliance, comprising an end-pin, was used to distalize the mandibular first molar in five children. The purpose of this study was to assess the effectiveness of this appliance and to evaluate the use of low-profile coils for distalization of the mandibular first molar. The modified TT appliance was used to distalize the mandibular first molar in five children aged 8-10 years with a mean pretreatment overjet of 8.7 mm. In the first 2 weeks the modified TT appliance was used with elastic chain, in the next 2 weeks with coils and in the next 2 weeks the elastic chain was removed. Before (T1) and every 2 weeks after (T2, T3 and T4) the use of the modified TT appliance, the mandibular first molars were examined by means of the gnathological examination (GOE) and a radiographic analysis (RAD). The elastic chain was removed before T3 to evaluate the stability of the molar distalization. At T4 the molars were further assessed by means of the GOE. The mandibular first molars were successfully distalized in all five patients. No clinical relapse was observed. Radiographic analysis revealed that the molars were mesially displaced at T4; 3.0 mm on average at the distal segment (T4) and 1.8 mm at the mesial segment (T1). GOE showed that distalization had been achieved at T4 and that the molars were stable at the end of treatment. The modified TT appliance and low-profile coils is a simple, effective and reliable method for distalizing the mandibular first molar in children.
