"I am not an NPC"... I am a warrior, so I can't comment the action RPG genre, but I want to share my first impression of the game. First of all, since I never played an action RPG before, I don't quite know what this style of game is like, so I have to say that it's kind of like a cross of a role-playing game and a hack-and-slash game. It does have a story and it does have an open world, but you don't really get to control the actions of your allies. It is unlike a traditional RPG, where you are the hero and everything is completely under your control. Instead, this game has you playing an NPC, and you have a little bit of control over your allies, but it doesn't really stop you from dying. It is because of the action element that the game isn't so great, and I feel it could have used more specific style of gameplay that would have helped it overcome the hurdles that it had to overcome. It does have some game mechanics that are very impressive. For example, the team that made it learned about this style of game through previous games. The controls don't feel convoluted. You can play the game with just a single button. There are plenty of different attacking buttons, and it lets you attack in the time that makes sense for you. Because of the action aspect, it is somewhat unforgiving. Unlike a role-playing game, where you can die at almost any time, you'll usually die very quickly in this game. The game only has a minimum of health. It isn't like you are bleeding at all, and it isn't even like you have a stamina meter. You can die very quickly. You can also die easily due to a lack of protective gear, such as weapons. You never have the opportunity to buy armor, and you never have the opportunity to receive any additional experience. You could stay here and die for hundreds of hours. This game isn't meant for hardcore action players. I feel it is a good game, but I don't really think that it is worth the money. To be honest, in the action RPG genre, I felt that it was a bit hard to find games that were worth buying. In some ways, it reminded me of World of Warcraft. It didn't feel like a very good value for the money. You can find people who are willing to spend $60 bff6bb2d33

I really like games from the middle ages (middle age of civilization). That's why I'm making this game.

Above all, the game is played online. Online games have no dealer who sells and you play with your friends.
