The guild and overall game experience in SWG has been compared to the growth of MMORPGs since the creation of the game. With the release of this MMO sandbox into the real world, the level of programming required to make it work is nearly 20 years beyond anything that could be sold with the release of SWG. RuneScape was initially released by Jagex in 2001, as a clone of World of Warcraft. As with WoW, this massively multiplayer online role-playing game has been allowed to be continued by the developers and community and now is one of the most downloaded games, together with World of Warcraft itself. The game is still under development, and new modules are being added frequently. This has started with the recent RuneScape 3. In May 2006 the final version of the game was released and was re-branded to RuneScape 2. This release became the most popular update with the release of the 100% Gold Scrap Fix (see below) and the introduction of The Gauntlet. RuneScape is available for Microsoft Windows, OS X, Pocket PC, Symbian, Android and iOS. An Apple II version of RuneScape was released in 2001 but was discontinued after that. A modified version of RuneScape called RuneScape Classic was released for the Game Boy Advance in 2003. A version of the game for Linux was developed by gNewSense and released by RuneScape developer Jagex.[5] The iOS version of RuneScape will be released for iOS in 2015.[6] The alpha and beta

Nigel Farage during a meeting with supporters as part of his 'Brexit Means Brexit' campaign in Wentworth, South-West England, U.K., July 13, 2018. REUTERS/Henry Nicholls LONDON (Reuters) - Britain would still be bound by laws after leaving the European Union in 2019 if there were a re-run of the vote to leave the bloc that took place in 2016, the chairman of one of the two leading leave campaigns said on Wednesday. "If the decision had gone the other way, we'd still be bound by EU law today," Nigel Farage said in remarks published by the Telegraph newspaper on Wednesday.
Farage, who helped to lead the campaign to leave the EU, said Prime Minister Theresa May's strategy for getting a Brexit deal over the line and winning Parliament's support for the agreement was to "offer us Europe and the rest of the world". "I don't think she's been able to do that, and that's why they've so far failed
