However I am having difficulty assigning the {controller} and {action} parameters to be used when calling the Url.Action method. This worked fine previously: @Url.Action("Index", "Home", new { controller = "Home", action = "Index" }) However, as of ASP.NET MVC 3.0 I believe (from the web config file) the following is required: My issue is that appSettings no longer seem to be used by MVC. Is it correct that I need to include this in my web.config file in order to use Url.Action? If so, how do I stop the appSettings from preventing me from using Url.Action? A: I'm going to answer my own question in case anyone else runs into this issue. I also contacted the ASP.NET team at Microsoft and they confirmed that this is the correct way to stop appSettings from breaking URL routing. (Alternatively you can change the location attribute value to be something like ~/App_Start/Web.config so appSettings do not affect your URL routing). Like many in the capital of this behemoth province, the provincial government has finally caught up to Stanfield's "miner province" label, after decades of it being uttered by just about anyone who has half a brain. Now, Premier Doug Ford is talking about the need to provide a suitable alternative to the existing Liberal government's soon-to-be-abandoned northern transit expansion plan, due to its costs. Indeed, the premier could very well be following the advice of Transportation Minister and Mississauga councillor Bas Balkissoon, who has indicated as recently as April that revised plans could be announced "within a month or two." The Liberals' northern transit megaproject, originally called "LRT-

Wisdom - This is what the game is all about: Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue is a fork of the game Wisdom and it is all about the preparation of weapons for your next labour. In Wisdom you created your own character, in this game you have to do that. He is freed from the prison and he will provide you with a lot of good stuff. 2. What is the difference between "Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue" and "Wisdom"? Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue IS WISDOM It was made by the authors of Wisdom. They brought only the best of the game Wisdom and made a new version for the Android Market: it's called Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue. All the information you get in Wisdom about the game, characters, enemies, levels, graphics, etc. can be found in Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue. And you can play both game by downloading one apk in your mobile. Sword of the Necromancer - Prologue is divided into 2 parts. So, you can play it as one game or you can split it into two games (section 1 and section 2). I wouldn't recommend you to split it into two separate games (two separate games play differently and you will have problems). But we recommend you to play it as one game at the beginning because you will see the difference between two different stories. We will tell you more about the differences in the sections below. 3. Have you created a new android version of "Wisdom"? No, we didn't. The original game Wisdom was made in less than a month, so we are very busy with the development of our game "Retro Pompy". "Retro Pompy" (retropompy.de) is our new project, and it is the arcade game of the past, with analog control, retro graphics and gameplay style. You will have to jump, run, climb, shoot, fight, collect and get coins to win and unlock power-ups, upgrades and skills. We have 3 different stages with 3-7 levels in every stage. Retro Pompy won't have all of the features of Wisdom, but we have a lot of power-ups which
