A new fantasy action RPG! Introduction "What is this thing you call life?" Horror overcame Ganymede, the Goddess of Life. As the Goddess of Youth she was in charge of bringing life into being. With a God of Destruction she had nothing to worry about as far as birth was concerned, but the birth of life was an entirely different story. "If you even dare dream this all might end." With her life she had lost all happiness, which was the major issue. Without the power of the Divine which she had held as the Goddess of Life, she no longer had the ability to move freely in this world. Including her own self, she was slowly being worn down by the essence of the Gods, so much so that she had lost all her memories. Unable to remember how she came to be, she slowly lost the power to renew the essence in her body. Finally, she could not stand it any longer. "Give me back my life!" Confronting all the Gods before her, she pleaded for help, but none of them gave her a reply, and the answers she received from them only made things worse. "You said you love my life." After a few days of such worrying, she had finally worked it out, being the Goddess of Life she couldn't just not have life. She still hadn't worked out how she was supposed to give birth

Janus is named after the two-faced Roman god, Janus. It is the first synonym of the one behind this definition, or any synonym of the page you have landed on. It can mean: (1) a time-related event; like 'The party broke up at 9 p.m.' or 'The project was completed at 9 a.m.'. The latter is more commonly known as the 'closing time'. (2) a specific time period (usually a week). For example, 'three years ago' or 'today'. (3) an event that specifically occurs at a specific time. For example, 'He left at 12 p.m.' or 'The seminar finishes at 2.15 p.m.'. In terms of time, a synonym for 'closing time' would be'separation time', 'departure time', 'end time', 'end-of-event time' or'separation time-period'. (4) a period of construction work, often associated with a building or programme. For example, 'the time of the latest round of renovations'.
