Teorija Zavere's latest book published in j.Q: Using dynamic array of c++ I have a struct declared as: struct Point{ float x,y; }; typedef struct Point points[4]; points[0].x=1.0f; points[0].y=2.0f; points[1].x=1.0f; points[1].y=2.0f; points[2].x=1.0f; points[2].y=2.0f; points[3].x=1.0f; points[3].y=2.0f; A pointer to this struct will point to the first element of the points array. I define an array of four pointers like this: points* ptr2 = (points*) malloc(sizeof(points)); The problem is that when I try to access the elements like this: ptr2[0].x = 1.0f; it gives me segmentation fault. What am I doing wrong? A: Based on the code you posted, you are not doing anything wrong. The problem is that you are not initializing the fields in the struct. In the lines: points[0].x=1.0f; points[0].y=2.0f; points[1].x=1.0f; points[1].y=2.0f; points[2].x=1.0f; points[2].y=2.0f; points[3].x=1.0f; points[3].y=2.0f; you have to initialize the fields with values, e.g. points[0].x = 1.0f; points[0].y = 2.0f; points[1].x = 1.0f; points[1].y = 2.0f; points[2].x = 1.0f; points[2].y = 2.0f; points[3].x = 1.0 0cc13bf012

The problem is that the output is a list of directory names which I want to use as the directory for a recursion call. However I'm having trouble getting it to work. The code being run is like this: find $new-root -maxdepth 1 -type d > $output I then need to use the contents of $output as the new root for my recursion call. To get this I do: rm -rf $output ls -A | grep "^d" > $output ls -A | grep "^d" | cat -ve | grep "$(echo -e $output\;)" | grep -v ^$ rm -rf $output This should output every directory within $output to a text file, excluding the $output directory itself. This works in the general case, ie replacing ls with wc will return an accurate count, however when the script encounters a directory called the output directory itself then it becomes a bit problematic. This is because the output directory is a loop back directory that just outputs the files of its parent dir. So the output directory itself then gets counted as part of the recursion. There must be a cleaner

Apostolic Prefecture of Kiev and Galich. In 1621 the Russian Orthodox Church split from the Russian Orthodox Church in the Kazan-Altaisk area, following the doctrines developed by the Iconoclasts. Other clergies held by Peter and his successors only came to be accepted by the whole Russian Church in 1666 at the Synod of Murom. The iconoclasts made "windows" in the icons into loopholes and many ways so that their prejudices will not be expressed, so there are many flaws in the icons. The comparison with the Vatican frescos of Michelangelo is wrong, the latter are the expression of one model in contrast to the iconoclasts with their compromise. The Vatican frescos are the result of a personal idea of Pope Julius II in contrast to the iconoclasts ideal. ISLAM KAFAÅ⁏ HAKEMAÅ⁏ Abiabd Allah NUR onlend: Dejan Lucic - Teorija Zavere. The letters of the crew were known to the public until the time when a Sri Lankan member of the crew of the Titanic, MV Clue (Fleetway) tried to sell them to a Norwegian businessman for $ 3.6 million. When the owner refused to pay the amount, the man was forced to make the letters public. Without the owner's permission, the letters were put up for auction by Sotheby's in May 2002. The auction was cancelled due to high demand for the letters and considerable effort was made by government agencies to retrieve the letters for the public.
