There is lots of weird stuff going on on our planet, with our universe stretching on for ever out there. The key question is what happened when and how did this all start? 1\ The Big Bang 2\.? 3\.??? 4\.??? How it began seems to be shrouded in a fog of mystery - recent claims of detecting gravitational waves and dark matter have been ridiculed - so we do not know. The interesting questions would be to ask how did things get created? When and how did things begin? ~~~

Vray 4 ...Q: Detecting side-effects of a join Lets say I have a query that does a join, and then runs some other SQL that uses the results of that join to do other stuff: select * from a left join b on b.a_id = a.id where a.id = 1 This is basically the same as: select * from a join (select * from b where b.a_id = 1) b on b.a_id = a.id Lets say that the other SQL (known only at runtime) involves some side-effects, and those side-effects get calculated or updated based on the results of the join. The problem is that the "side-effect detection" code that runs as part of the second example, even though it runs AFTER the join, is run in a
