1. Adobe Photoshop Elements: Best Free Photo Editing Software Pricing: Free version is ad-supported. What you get: 40-bit Bit Depth: We've already talked about how the higher the bit depth, the more colors the digital image can have. A higher bit depth means that the image has more color information. A straight truth about photos is that you can never take enough colors in. The more color the image has, the more details you can see in the image. It also gives more control to you on the color transformation and lighting tools. Nik Software Dimension: Aperture and Focal Length When it comes to photos, aperture and focal length are very important. The thing is, a lot of people get confused when it comes to these. Of course, you'd want more light to capture a higher-quality photo, but it also means your blur will be reduced. 20: 1 13: 1 35: 1 11: 1 The advantages of having a high focal length is that it will reduce the blurring of the photo while the advantage of having a small focal length is that it will have more depth in the photo. DxO Aperture: Focal Length: If you're new to the field, knowing these terms will help you to know more about them. And that's what you can start with in 2020. 2. DxO Optics Pro Photo Editor Pricing: Free version is ad-supported. What you get: Aperture: Focal Length: Dimension: Megapixel: You can customize your photo sizes, you can even add layer styles, crop it and add creative effects. 3. Magisto Pricing: Free version is ad-supported. What you get: Gamut (Color Range): On Windows, the plug-ins come in two types: ones that have a limited color gamut and ones that have a full color gamut. However, the plug-ins offered by Magisto have a full color gamut. On macOS, plugins have no color gamut as well. 4. DxO Optics Pro Photo Editor 8ce3bd8656

Q: Python 2 - Importing CSV file to dictionary I am trying to take a CSV file and make it a dictionary. I have tried doing: `df=pd.read_csv('/Users/avc/test.csv', header=None,sep=',')` `d = df.to_dict()` but I get a blank dictionary. When I import my CSV file in python it has a set of dictionary for each row in the first column with the values and the second column is all NaN. Anyone know what's going on? Thanks in advance. A: You should specify the keys in `to_dict`: `import pandas as pd df = pd.read_csv('/Users/avc/test.csv', header=None,sep=',')` `d = df.to_dict(orient='index')` It should return `{'a':10, 'b':11, 'c':12}` Buy the eBook Synopsis "Here's the first sane look at a future without Americans. You won't be able to read a USA Today without seeing Sean Hannity's face. What passes for news is being manipulated by true believers who act like the rest of us are deluded. People can smell a con in a book, but seldom will." --Thomas Friedman, columnist, New York Times When the American people learn about the fact that the White House will no longer be run by a lunatic, some of them are bound to be a little disappointed. But you don't need to be a scientist to know that the White House is going to be changed somehow. Sure, you can argue about who will be in power and the makeup of the administration. But it's all just a matter of semantics. What's missing from the whole debate is that the American people have a direct hand in the new government, and they are going to get a say in who will lead it. Born in the United States, Jeff Steinhauer's new book Explaining America is an attempt to define a new way to view the place that calls itself home. He has traveled all over the country to find out what people think about the United States and what they want. His findings are illuminating, and you will find them here. You will also hear from a whistle-blower who knows firsthand how little we Americans know about the future of our own country
