The Otome the Exorcist [official site] is a visual novel by Dream Piper, a group of college friends who've made their dream of developing a PC otome game a reality. There are currently three girls in charge of the Otome the Exorcist development team and it's their skills and passion that makes Otome the Exorcist an engaging visual novel. If you're looking for a game similar to the traditional visual novel that's hit the market over the last year or two, you'll be happy to hear that Otome the Exorcist falls into that category. Otome the Exorcist has otome game elements like school life, exams, and romances, but it also has an anime style that gives the game a unique feel. If you need more convincing check out our Otome the Exorcist overview. From the Team: Otome the Exorcist is an anime-inspired PC visual novel where you control Saki, a 6th-grade pupil at school. Upon arriving at school, Saki is met by a beautiful teacher. Unfortunately, she's a transvestite who is hiding a dark secret in her past. The game is loosely based on the otome genre, where the school student protagonist follows the schoolgirl route. This includes the romance route, but also includes character development, quests to help the hero save the girls in the school, and many more things that might happen throughout the day. We're not dating sims! The game includes many different characters with distinct personalities and charisma. The vast cast includes both male and female schoolgirls, teachers, and heroines! You can customize Saki's appearance in the very beginning to help her look like the kind of heroine you'd like to go on a date with! Our story is coming up. You'll have to wait until release to find out. But please, just go ahead and buy the game when it releases at the end of March. And now, here are our devs in their own words By Dooze Dream Piper CEO, Kazuya Oh my god, it's been a year since I last posted... hello. Dead Nation is a brutal, next generation survival shooter with free-flowing combat and deep, responsive gameplay. The Action is frenetic, visceral, and extremely fluid, with bullet time combat and weapon lock-ons adding an extra layer of brutality. The game also boasts an ambitious campaign mode and a robust crafting and weapon building system that will keep even the most seasoned Dead Nation players on their toes as they look to overcome the dead. Key Features:

- Bullet-Time Bullet-Time makes its way back into the Dead Nation experience! Respawns, are key for staying alive when in firefights, so tap (on the d-pad) to successfully execute your bullets with a new bullet-time-based effect which allows you to react to incoming bullets by “pausing time” and allowing you to accurately choose where to aim and what to aim at (for example, tap when a gun is fired at your head, as your head is the perfect point to aim at).
- New weapons and perks: the M1895 Repeater is a .30 caliber bolt-action rifle that fires a fast-firing .30 caliber round. A part of the weapon suite is the H-29 Hunter’s Garb, which was specifically designed to match the look and feel of the M1895 Repeater.
- Weapon sets and stats: after every 5 kills, players can purchase weapon sets and upgrades via a new crafting system. Weapon sets have varying stat-based bonuses such as increased bullet penetration, or increased damage against armoured enemies. Upgrades increase damage on certain weapons, or provide players a bonus to their perk stats.
- A robust crafting and inventory system: craft a new shield, weapon, grenade, food ration, and more with the purpose of acquiring new items. The crafting system allows for a wide selection of new items that may be found in both the open world environment and in zombie-infested player controlled safe houses (where loot is dropped by the zombie horde).
- A dynamic day/night cycle: no more rushing to bed at dusk only to be attacked by scores of crazed zombies. In the new “day” mode, zombies transform from the all-too-lively living dead into stationary zombies with a stat boost and better aim. As you make your way through the day, you are rewarded with new gear and perks.
- A whole new level of player freedom and choice: the player is always in control of their own destiny. Players can freely move
