X Rebirth's premier soundtrack is the musical soundtrack to a generation - several decades old, but timeless. It has been part of the game since the start and will remain as a musical companion to the universe of X Rebirth for years to come. I would like to introduce to you Alexei Zakharov, the composer, producer and music manager of X4: Cradle of Humanity, covering the main menu tracks as well as 3 Bonus Tracks from the main menu of X4: Cradle of Humanity. So, let's start with our main menu. ● Track 01: Hybris Rhythmic, tense and rich in sound, this track, as a rhythmical lead-in to the main menu, is mainly composed of organ-like and synthetic keyboard sounds. Underlying this large atmosphere is the bell-like note of the piano, which plays over all of this. ● Track 02: Life The track is rich in romantic tension and introspective feelings. It has a dramatic sound to it with evocative sounds in the background. Most of the music is composed of the piano and has a chorus-like feeling. ● Track 03: The Yearning After the ending tune from the main menu, this track starts rather quietly with a much thinner atmosphere. After a while, it builds up and reaches the climax. Synths are present but the track runs mainly on the piano. ● Track 04: Ceremonial By far, one of the most epic tracks in the entire game. It opens with a dramatic, powerful, introspective music while at the same time demanding a strong rhythm. There are absolutely no moments of calm between the various bright sounds. Always the main sound is the organ in an immense soundscape with secondary elements, such as deep strings, brass, a solo guitar and a solo synth. All in all, it's an absolutely awesome track and is also the main title theme. ● Track 05: Gloom Creepy, moody and at the same time beautiful, this track is mainly composed of synth sounds. ● Track 06: The Awakening

Overweight with lush synthesizers and full of energy, this track is intensely rhythmic. ● Track 07: The Path The track is composed of organ-like sounds and synthesizers, with a little touch of guitar and strings. ● Track 08: Usurper Starting with an exciting intro, it builds up and reaches its peak with an amazing bass drum-like sound

's newest information on this story will be available here. UPDATE: 6-2-17 BP Oil Spill Lawsuit On July 28, 2016 this preliminary court order was filed, which placed a temporary injunction on hydraulic fracturing at the Norwegian site, and which permanently shut down the shale frac drilling here (Norway) and in nearly every other county subject to the western and central regions until they submitted revised seismic work plans to be approved by this court. The parties responsible were punished by this court order and Judge Rothenberg retained jurisdiction for entry of final judgment to confirm and clarify the June 17, 2016 record dates only. These records are not yet public, but when they are, they will be posted at www.PublicTrustReform.org. Favorable Brief On July 1, 2016, this court filed a favorable filing, "Logical Rule of Reason," which can be seen by clickinghere. The background of the case can be seen here The name of this judge is John Rothenberg. (Click for full biography at Judicial can be seen by clicking here.) Conclusions Unfortunately, the legal answers from the bench are typically inadequate, and understandably so. There is typically no need to rake these seas over volcanic fire again and again, as we already know what happens. Nevertheless, contrary to all the legal or scientific evidence so far - absent the impacts on the public trust, which are and will be substantial - and in spite of a recent "emergency" application from the oil industry, personal manifest due process protections and other flaws, all this court seems to be able to focus on in its sub-committees and proposed even more flawed provisions is the state's oil and gas industry. Judge Rothenberg believes that taking away the right to sue in this case, and in this largely self-selecting, self-policing court, is important. He is mistaken, and is inviting not yet solved legal and ethical problems in this court. This is the last paragraph of the court order, below: "It is to the public trust that these case-related records are to be held. These appear to have no overriding need to be carried out by private parties. This court expects that the oil and gas industry will

With the prospect of prying out the business cycle window and prodding the economy toward a sustainable recovery in late 2013 or early 2014, bond markets have been the negative surprise. All told, the 10-year Treasury bill auctions between 2009 and 2013 resulted in bidding down yields a total of 111 basis points, or almost ¼ percent. Alternatively phrased, bond purchasers on average bid "smaller." It's clear that we have reached a point in the 10-year Treasury market where a broader "stigma" spreads to consort with other three- and five-year bonds. Fears are increasing about the political risks around rising bond yields that prevent yield-conscious interest rate speculators from buying more Treasury. Fears about rising yields also shape the psychology of risk-averse stationary investors. We saw this in large-scale flight from long-term inflation-adjusted income funds as they increase the costs for corporations and individuals to finance long-term expenditures. Doubts about action on Capitol Hill And then there is the "opportunity cost" factor. While the Fed is gradually dialing back its asset purchases to an as-yet undisclosed level, the Treasury is reaping the gains of monthly asset purchases from the $16 billion a month that began in December 2012
