Any chance someone could take a look? A: Maybe i didn't understand your question but do you want to load your own html pages (from an URL) or display sites you like in your application? In the latter case i think you'll have to display Google, or YouTube searches through the builtin browser. You could also try to parse the HTML at realtime, but i never tried it. Google shows results fast enough and this seems more fun for me. Q: Cannot call console.log when targeting Chrome and Safari Code: `document.addEventListener("DOMContentLoaded", function(){ console.log("function"); //This works console.log("object"); //This doesnt work });` I tried to use both console.log and console.writeln. Same result. Am I doing something wrong? A: `var a = 1;` and if you print out a with `'console.log(a);'` on chrome, you should see '

Cheesecake Cool Conrad is an award-winning game that has really spread like wildfire throughout the planet. While our fridge back at the portal seems empty and cold with nothing but frozen pizzas, chocolate bars and other various cakes, we're sure you would agree when we say 'it's time to go out again'. The Cheesecake Cool Conrad story has been in the making back in 2010 and we have been working hard to complete it just for you. We hope this Ice Cream adventure brings back the warm and fuzzy feeling of your childhood as you go and help our hero the Cool Conrad reach the portal to hopefully return to the home world he loves, with his wife. ----- Like us on Facebook: Follow us on Twitter: Free game: Cool Conrad Cool Game Life is good for the Cool. But what about the rest of us? With nothing but a newspaper and a jar of cool in his hand, the Cool must travel to the most dangerous parts of the world to try and find something that will thaw the universe. Join the Cool on the most dangerous mission of his life! Kappa Momoko No Nai Tanteitappa As usual, I'm starting an official video game, this time a 2-channeled one. Not sure about this game yet but will soon be making a decision about this. I'm thinking about doing like a horror game, maybe a survival game. I don't know yet. I have the idea already but no idea about how to do it yet. I'm also trying to figure out what to do with the first game I'm making. So far it's not really working... but I will figure it out. Anyway, the game is based on Kappa Momoko, a female kappa girl, but she's actually a guy. I'm not sure yet if I'm making a Bishonen game, so, you will have to wait to see a bit more. I'm also thinking about making this game like that, because I think if I could make it a 2-channel game, I should put in a female character of a kappa girl. Let me know what you think. I'm also thinking about doing a PV based on this game, but I'm not sure yet. We'll see... Thanks for watching. Fanta

What's new in Spectromancer: Gathering Of Power:

- Calum Waddell, Reviewed In Western movies, revenge dramas, and the occasional true crime story, unfortunate events often result in the death of innocent non-human animals. Often, these mass murders are treated with an air of glee and even full-blown schadenfreude, as if they're a treat we savor with gusto. I've noticed, however, that most non-human dead animals seen in movies or on TV take the form of what one might call 'lumbering, organic systems': domesticated animals that have no particular interest in escaping their punishments and suffering such as bucks and horned cats and goats and horses and basset hounds. Culturally important scapegoats, such as Eskimo dogs in Spaghetti Westerns, are far better game. Still, there are also non-indigenous deep-sea mammals seen in movies as after dinner prizes to eat. They don't usually have the requisite personality traits to act as bucolic or noble sacrifices. In this book, we're going to be talking about a very special creature - something we might refer to as a 'gratuitous animal massacre'. I'm going to emphasize that it's not your run-of-the-mill slaughter video game or a military-style shooting range, but a very specific kind of butchering, mutilating and murdering that's so depraved and sick and hateful that it amounts to a truly mind-blowing act of cruelty. 'I'M NOT GONNA BE ABLE TO LIVE WITHOUT MY JUNIOR IDOL. HE CARRIES ME ALONG ON HIS BACK AND GRASPES ME WITH HIS STRONG, RIPPLEY POPLAR FUUFFS...' Among its myriad banes, the Book of Faces has featured many monsters aside from the Lady Gaga version of a massive whale. I'm to the point where I'd even listed it in the preface, along with the forthcoming film-it's been seven years in the making, and the long wait is now my undoing - PART IV of Branded Juniors. I mentioned that there was some new stuff I was going to be living without, if you recall. That's what you'll be seeing in this, the fourth and final installment. The book is entirely composed of slaughter photos
