
Windows 7 Pro Natl Academic Only Oa Iso

Hi Sam, I just looked at the sticker on the laptop and it clearly has a product key (along with the COA and ATA sticker and serial number). I just reinstalled Windows 7 from the recovery DVD and it works great now. Please note, you can have just one recovery DVD (aka Recovery Media) it will install both Windows 7 and Windows Server 2012 R2. Threw the sticker away that I had, so no product key to work out in that case. We have some of those Windows recovery DVDs, but not the Acer ones. Ive had to do something similar to that with a customer a few months ago and we ended up going with the OEM version of Windows, which is a bit of a shame really. It works a treat, and to get the OEM version you just simply put in the Windows sticker with the product key on it (found on your internet browser where you first buy the laptop. Ok, the Home Access/Pro series laptops don't have a product key on the sticker, but I found the product key on the sticker on my Home Access laptop. Does this mean that I just need to wipe the laptop (the entire thing) and then download and install the appropriate version (32 bit or 64 bit) of Windows 7 from the recovery partition? Ok, after examining the COA sticker on the laptop, I can see the product key is on the sticker (as shown above). I'm presuming the product key you found is the product key for the Windows 7 installation? Does this mean I just need to wipe the laptop and then download and install the appropriate version of Windows 7 from the recovery partition?
